Fake News and Disinformation - How and Why

Tonight, NHK Niigata aired an extremely nauseating news segment saying, "everyone should embrace the presence of fake news sites because they're funny".

This in regard to some specific goings on at the US capitol today and the current crisis involving the supposed "Trump coup" (the actual details of which they conspicuously omitted from the broadcast).

NHK news people said "there was concern [by whom?] that the public might be misinformed about what was happening there."

(Which we should take to mean that they were concerned that some of us KNEW what was really happening there.)

"Fake news sites are websites", they said, "which present facetious news stories intended to make people laugh". The anchor persons then proceeded to have a rather stiff and contrived guffaw over the example story presented; "LAKE BIWA DRAINED TO KILL DEADLY ALIEN SPACE FISH!"

(Since when does the news make recommendations to the public about humorous entertainment? Red Flag!)

They even went so far as to say that "we should pity cultures that don't have the benefit of fake news sites". (!)

(How gullible are the Japanese...?!)

Well, the actual truth of the matter is that "fake news" websites are specifically created by WESTERN (often Israeli, British, or US; not Chinese or Russian as some have claimed) intelligence organizations for purposes of sewing confusing disinformation.

The REAL purpose of these sites is to host a load of 'humorous' or 'absurd' stories so that articles containing actual truthful information inconvenient to the "powers that be" can be posted right alongside them, unedited and right out in the open.

This has two functions useful to these "powers that be":

1) The casual reader will assume the truthful story to be false because of the 'joke' nature of the site in question. He will then argue that the story was a joke should he meet someone trying to spread the truthful information. (Thus, the general public themselves can be enlisted as unwitting disinformation agents.)

2) When concerned citizens attempt to spread alarming truths in order to wake people up (say, on a forum or message board), but the truths in question have already been discredited by being posted on one of these "humour" sites, not only can those persons or agents antagonistic to the truthful statement point to it and say, "they got this story from such-and-such fake news website." They can also undermine the credibility of the person trying to spread the truth by then saying, "this dumb shit doesn't even know a joke website when he sees one! How can you believe anything he says!" then everyone will laugh and ignore the truthsayer from then on.

I presented to Anne the example of a "joke news" website which presented (between stories about alien bodies found on the remains of Noah's ark and Elvis being cloned by satanists) the entirely truthful story that the Smithsonian had been found guilty in court of destroying a huge number of anomalous giant (7-9') human skeletons with elongated skulls found over the years on US soil, especially in Alabama and Utah. These remains were shown by a whistleblower in court to have been loaded onto a barge and subsequently dumped into the Atlantic (the whistleblower was an eyewitness and participant who regretted his involvement). This truthful story is a famous one with many details and has been covered in several old books and 1990's periodicals; analyses of the large, extensively photographed elongate skulls even revealed the absence of the foramen ovales (which transmits the mandibular nerve, accessory meningeal artery, lesser petrosal nerve and the emissary veins). Anomalous features in other areas of these large skulls apparently performing the same functions were found to be present instead (for example in a keyhole-like slot on the back of the head instead of the normal place either side of the opening at the neck/spinal cord). Among the finds was a pregnant female long-skulled mummy with a long-skulled foetus mummified inside her. (So this couldn't have been artificial cranial deformation.) Literally piles of pictures are available and similar finds are still displayed in museums in South America, particularly Paracas Peru which features items from the astonishing Cabezas Largas area dig (but the American media only ridicules and discredits such things. American archaeology is totally different from South American Archaeology; American archaeology fits perfectly the definition of pseudoscience - cooking the facts to fit the conclusion). Not only was the Smithsonian fined $10,000 for destroying properties of American Indian heritage, but they were forbidden by court order to do any such thing ever again. However, whistleblowers reported the Smithsonian never ceased their policy of destroying remains inconvenient to their preferred narrative of how America was populated and which also inconveniently challenged popular theories of human evolution.

So a fake news site recently republished a sensationalized version of this info and so now few realize the truth of the matter, taking it as "humour".

One modern 'humour'/fake news website which posted this "Smithsonian fined for destroying giant skeletons" story amongst their ludicrous/facetious articles had an "about us" page, which frankly surprised me in that it confirmed exactly what I expected; they described themselves as "a Marxist-Zionist organization based in Israel which writes humorous stories about the Bible for the sake of amusement only."

Oh is that all? No, they forgot to say, "and to undermine Christianity and any truths inconvenient to us which might constitute for them proof of the veracity of their religious beliefs."

They might also have said,

"Since the Talmud commands us to undermine Christianity at every turn."

and

"Since in our Protocols of Zion, Protocol #4 calls for the obliteration of all religious belief so that the Goyam will have no faith higher than service to the state in our future world government."

So tonight NHK interviewed a supposed author from a "fake news site", who appeared with his head bizarrely covered in a cardboard mask. This person referred to themselves as "UK san" and gave an obviously false account of why he supposedly opened a certain prominent Japanese fake news site.

Why "UK san"? Because the disinformation technique I described for you and outlined above was developed and perfected by the UK's Marxist-Zionist controlled Tavistock Institute of Human Relations (which had a large role in the creation of the modern state of Israel) and first deployed this technique against British citizens through MI5 and the BBC. The technique was then shared with their Trilateral Commission parallel organizations for "societal change" (read media manipulation) The American Psychological Association, Stanford Research Institute, and the Japan Psychoanalytic Society (Nippon Seishin-Bunseki Kyokai) and turned upon the public in those countries as well in order to retard and sabotage the knowledge base of the public as to what is really going on in the world.

...And to fulfil Protocol #4 of course.

A couple of decades ago they used to say that the future would be the era of "information war", yet we never hear this phrase bandied about on CNN anymore... Why not? Because the war is going on right now and is being conducted against us!

There are those who choose to embrace a comfortable deception and those who instead prefer to embrace the sometimes-difficult path of loving the truth.

Which is more important to you?

It is definitely time for everyone to think about how they feel about this question.
